

Remember, any child could be at risk of harm. They can live in well-off or poor families, be of any age or any ethnic or cultural background.

Some families deliberately avoid contact with professionals who can help and support them and their children. Therefore we need you to tell us of any concerns.

Reporting your concerns to social care DOES NOT mean that a family will have their children taken away. It is always our aim to keep families together. When an allegation is made, social workers work with other agencies to make sure a child or young person is safe and their needs are met. In some cases, social workers and police officers work together to investigate of child abuse.

Raising Awareness Children at Risk

A guide to help you safeguard a child

A child can be harmed anywhere, at any time, by anyone.

Children can be harmed in different ways and it is your responsibility to make sure that they are protected, even if they are not your own.

If a child is harmed, it is usually because of the way adults or other children behave towards them. It can also happen if adults fail to provide proper care for them. Harming or neglecting a child is always wrong but it is never the child's fault.

some signs to look out for

You may be concerned about a child if he or she:

- is frequently dirty, smelly, hungry or inadequately dressed
- is constantly insulted, sworn at, humiliated or is constantly blamed for things that go wrong
- seems afraid of their parents or carers
- has illnesses which haven't been treated
- is not properly supervised
- who craves inappropriate attention and affection from any adult
- is growing up in an environment where there is domestic violence, drug or alcohol abuse
- displays sexual knowledge or behaviour which doesn't seem appropriate for their age
- is being encouraged to be secretive about their relationship with an adult

- is a baby with an injury that they would be too young to get on their own
- has burns, scalds or bruises with clear outlines

They may show their unhappiness in many ways, including:

- being unusually nervous, anxious, withdrawn and isolated
- being unusually angry and aggressive
- truancy or running away from home
- using drugs or alcohol
- deliberately causing serious harm to themselves or others

Remember, this leaflet does not cover every possibility. You may have seen other things in a child's behaviour that worries you.

If you have concerns about the safety of a child... it is your responsibility to report it.

You don't have to give us your name if you don't want to.
